

Metro Weather
Showers, then sunny. High 21C. Details A25.
Car lights on 7:49 p.m.
and off at 6:40 a.m. tomorrow.

THE TORONTO STAR

Tuesday
April 30, 1991
37¢ + 3¢ GST = 40¢
(higher in vending boxes and outside greater Metro)

ESTABLISHED 1892
METRO EDITION ★

ONTARIO'S FIRST NDP BUDGET UNDER FIRE

Budget will wipe out jobs, ruin economy, critics say

By Paula Todd, Derek Ferguson and Shawn McCarthy
TORONTO STAR

Ontario's first New Democrat budget will pillage jobs and plunge the province into economic despair for years to come, opposition parties and federal cabinet ministers have charged.

Federal minister of state for finance John McDermid said Ontario Treasurer Floyd Laughtren's recession-fighting budget, tabled at Queen's Park yesterday, could push interest rates higher and do long-term damage to the health of the provincial economy.

McDermid said tripling the province's deficit to a record $9.7 billion will discourage investment needed to pull the Ontario economy out of its deep slump.

And Federal Finance Minister Don Mazankowski added: "I don't think you can spend your way to prosperity. What you're doing here is postponing the burden of taxes on to next year and to future generations."

Full coverage on pages A16-A19
The Star's view/A22
Slow recovery predicted/B1

But Laughtren said the budget would create 70,000 new jobs and insisted: "It's basically a recession-driven budget."

"Given the severity of the recession that has hit Ontario, that is a reasonable deficit figure," Laughtren told reporters.

"It's not outrageous spending increases that have created this deficit," he said.

Mazankowski's predecessor, Michael Wilson, the architect of Conservative economic policy and now international trade minister, said the Ontario budget "is going to slow down our efforts as a country to get out of the recession."

The budget cuts taxes for 700,000 low-income families, hikes welfare spending, subsidizes 10,000 new co-operative housing units, offers loans for small manufacturers, raises taxes on alcohol, cigarettes and gas-guzzling cars, and imposes new taxes on high earners and financial institutions.

The $9.7 billion deficit dwarfs the $3.2 billion deficit the provincial Tories swallowed during the last recession. That 1982-83 budget totalled $22.5 billion, compared to $52.76 billion today.

"Any time a government goes out and triples its deficit and has to go into the marketplace to borrow money, that puts pressure on the money-lending institutions and puts up

Please see NDP/page A17.

BUDGET HIGHLIGHTS '91

- DEFICIT SOARS to record $9.7 billion
- INCOME TAXES rise for 165,000 people earning $84,000 or more, but are cut or eliminated for 115,000 low-income earners
- DRIVERS PAY a surtax from $200 to $7,000 to buy gas-guzzling cars, as well as 1.7 cents a litre more for gasoline
- 'SIN' TAXES rise today 42 cents on a large pack of cigarettes, and rise 5 cents a litre on liquor, beer, and wine May 27
- SOCIAL SPENDING rises $2.15 billion for welfare, $150 million for housing, $175 million for laid-off workers

RAE'S RAVE REVIEW: Treasurer Floyd Laughtren, left, is congratulated by Premier Bob Rae after the Ontario NDP's first budget was tabled.

NDP's budget could end up satisfying no one

Ontario Treasurer Floyd Laughtren promised an anti-recession budget. Did he deliver? Not really. At best, one can say that the Ontario New Democratic Party's first budget won't make the recession too much worse.

Laughtren resisted the national trend to slash spending. For this, he should be commended.

But he did not resist the temptation to boost taxes; over all, they will rise by about $520 million this year alone. For this, he deserves no praise.

A recession is the worst time to lift money from people's wallets and purses.

Indeed, a recession is when governments should spend or cut taxes. Such a prescription — usually associated with the late British economist J.M. Keynes — may be out of fashion in these lean, mean, nasty times. But it still works.

For when individuals have no money to spend, someone else has to step in and help. That's one of the reasons we have governments.

In opposition, Laughtren applauded this kind of economics. In theory, he still does.

But what has he actually done? Here the story becomes a little more complicated.

A big chunk of government spending in Ontario goes up virtually automatically. Welfare payments, for instance, rise as workers lose their jobs. This has been a particular problem since Ottawa changed unemployment insurance rules. Many Ontario workers who would normally qualify for

Please see BUDGET/back page

What they said

6 I know the minister has been softening people up for a big deficit, but I really didn't expect a figure of almost $10 billion
— Stephen Dufour, financial analyst

6 It makes Floyd look like the Lone Ranger riding to the rescue
— Gord Wilson, labor leader

6 They've simply opened the vault and everybody's got their paws in
— Jim Bradley, Liberal treasury critic

6 (It's the) beginning of the province's slide into the devastating spiral of increasing taxes and decreasing economic activity
— Mike Harris, Conservative leader

6 Very disappointing
— Michael Shapcott, housing activist

Civil service spared cuts despite urging by Ottawa

By Leslie Papp
TORONTO STAR

Ontario's 90,000 civil servants have escaped job cuts and wage caps, despite a $9.7 billion provincial deficit.

"It flies in the face of the advice we got from the federal government," Ontario Treasurer Floyd Laughtren conceded yesterday.

"We like to think the public service in Ontario are part of us, are partners," he told reporters, vowing not to match former federal finance minister Michael Wilson's civil service crackdown.

Wilson responded to Ottawa's troubling deficit by slapping a 3 per cent wage cap on federal public servants. In addition, 2,000 jobs will be cut for every 1 per cent wage hike won by their union, the Public Service Alliance of Canada.

Provincial governments in Atlantic

Canada, Quebec, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have followed Wilson's lead and moved to cap, or roll back, their public sector wages.

"I don't think that's appropriate," Laughtren said, explaining his budget at a news conference. "We would have had to lay off enormous numbers."

Instead of imposing a 3 per cent cap, Laughtren defended a 5.8 per cent wage hike won by the Ontario Public Service Employees Union this year.

Pattern-setting agreements for two civil service categories were set in December, when the inflation rate was running at about 6 per cent, he said.

An inflation rate of 5.6 per cent is expected this year, he said.

The government has done its best, he said, pointing with evident pride at predictions that more than 70,000 jobs will be created or saved through his budget.

Thomas Walkom
Analysis

1,000 to lose jobs as Elliot Lake mine shut

By Daniel Girard
TORONTO STAR

More than 1,000 people will lose their jobs with the closing of Denison Mines' uranium operation in Elliot Lake.

The Toronto-based company decided to close the mine after Ontario Hydro cancelled a contract to buy its uranium, president Bill James said yesterday. Denison employs 1,060 workers at the mine. Its only customer is Ontario Hydro.

Production will end once sales to the provincially owned utility have been completed in April or May, 1992.

"We are in a state of shock," said George Farkouh, mayor of the town of 16,000 about 120 kilometres (75 miles) west of Sudbury.

"We were expecting it, but how can you react to the demise of your main industry?" Farkouh said in an interview last night.

Elliot Lake has been hit by the loss of more than 2,300 jobs during the past 15 months. Rio Algom Ltd. has closed two mines and eliminated 1,700 jobs. Denison scaled back operations and cut 650 jobs.

The town's unemployment rate now exceeds 60 per cent.

"It's a hell of a hit for the town, but there's nothing you can do to that mine," James said in an interview from Elliot Lake yesterday.

"It's just a sad economic fact."

Ontario Hydro expects to save about $100 million a year by cancelling the contract, said Doug Smith, its director of fuels.

Hydro fuels its nuclear reactors with uranium. It has been trying to renegotiate

the contract because it must pay a higher than market price for the mineral.

Despite months of talks, Denison and Hydro could not agree on a price, James said.

Northern Development Minister Shelley Martel said the province will not bail out Denison Mines, The Star's Derek Ferguson reports.

Ontario taxpayers have paid $1 billion in subsidies to the Elliot Lake uranium mine the past two years, Martel told reporters. Please see 1,000/back page

We recycle!
Sections B & E of today's Star are printed on RECYCLED PAPER

100 killed as cyclone hammers Bangladesh

DHAKA (AP-Reuter) — A devastating tropical cyclone slammed into Bangladesh's low-lying southeastern coast today, killing at least 100 people and destroying tens of thousands of homes, officials said.

Officials said they feared a much higher death toll after the cyclone hit near the port of Chittagong with winds of up to 230 kilometres (145 miles) per hour.

The storm roared in from the Bay of Bengal at about midnight and battered 14 districts for more than seven hours, uprooting trees and ripping apart telephone and power lines, said a Relief Ministry official.

Weather officials said the storm was the most severe in the country's 20-year history. The winds were even stronger than the 1970 cyclone that killed 100,000 people.

Normal communications were severed, and the only source of information on the disaster came across the radio link of the Red Crescent, the Muslim equivalent of the Red Cross.

Before the storm hit, with waves up to six metres (20 feet) high, about three million people were moved out of an area where seven million live in 2,000 villages.

The relief ministry official said the storm left many offshore islands under 3.5 metres (10 feet) of water. The hurricane subsided around dawn.

The relief ministry official said the worst affected areas were the offshore islands of Bhola, Hatiya, Sandwip, Kutubdia, Moheshkhali and the mainland districts of Patuakhali, Chittagong, Cox's Bazaar, Feni and Satkhira.

PICK 3

Winning numbers: 432

CLEANSWEEP

Matchdraw: 11, 12, 21, 28, 38, 54
Four corners: 8, 19, 76, 80
"L": 15, 20, 40, 56, 67, 70, 79
Straight Line: 1, 39, 75

INDEX

March/91 Monday-Friday paid circulation 501,932

Apartments D13	Insight A21
Births, deaths D26	Jumble E8
Bridge E8	Landers F8
Comics F5	Legal notices F6
Crossword E8	Letters A22
Editorials A22	Stinger A2
Gamester A4	StarPhone A7
Goar A23	Star Probe F12
Horoscope F8	TV listings F3

A/News D/Sports/Classified
B/Business E/Careers
C/Golf Guide F/Entertainment/Life

Metro Weather
Showers, then sunny. High 21C. Details A25.
Car lights on 7:49 p.m.
and off at 6:40 a.m. tomorrow.

THE TORONTO STAR

Tuesday
April 30, 1991
37¢ + 3¢ GST = 40¢
(higher in vending boxes and outside greater Metro)

ESTABLISHED 1892
METRO EDITION ★

ONTARIO'S FIRST NDP BUDGET UNDER FIRE

Budget will wipe out jobs, ruin economy, critics say

By Paula Todd, Derek Ferguson and Shawn McCarthy
TORONTO STAR

Ontario's first New Democrat budget will pillage jobs and plunge the province into economic despair for years to come, opposition parties and federal cabinet ministers have charged.

Federal minister of state for finance John McDermid said Ontario Treasurer Floyd Laughtren's recession-fighting budget, tabled at Queen's Park yesterday, could push interest rates higher and do long-term damage to the health of the provincial economy.

McDermid said tripling the province's deficit to a record $9.7 billion will discourage investment needed to pull the Ontario economy out of its deep slump.

And Federal Finance Minister Don Mazankowski added: "I don't think you can spend your way to prosperity. What you're doing here is postponing the burden of taxes on to next year and to future generations."

Full coverage on pages A16-A19
The Star's view/A22
Slow recovery predicted/B1

But Laughtren said the budget would create 70,000 new jobs and insisted: "It's basically a recession-driven budget."

"Given the severity of the recession that has hit Ontario, that is a reasonable deficit figure," Laughtren told reporters.

"It's not outrageous spending increases that have created this deficit," he said.

Mazankowski's predecessor, Michael Wilson, the architect of Conservative economic policy and now international trade minister, said the Ontario budget "is going to slow down our efforts as a country to get out of the recession."

The budget cuts taxes for 700,000 low-income families, hikes welfare spending, subsidizes 10,000 new co-operative housing units, offers loans for small manufacturers, raises taxes on alcohol, cigarettes and gas-guzzling cars, and imposes new taxes on high earners and financial institutions.

The $9.7 billion deficit dwarfs the $3.2 billion deficit the provincial Tories swallowed during the last recession. That 1982-83 budget totalled $22.5 billion, compared to $52.76 billion today.

"Any time a government goes out and triples its deficit and has to go into the marketplace to borrow money, that puts pressure on the money-lending institutions and puts up

Please see NDP/page A17.

BUDGET HIGHLIGHTS '91

- DEFICIT SOARS to record $9.7 billion
- INCOME TAXES rise for 165,000 people earning $84,000 or more, but are cut or eliminated for 115,000 low-income earners
- DRIVERS PAY a surtax from $200 to $7,000 to buy gas-guzzling cars, as well as 1.7 cents a litre more for gasoline
- 'SIN' TAXES rise today 42 cents on a large pack of cigarettes, and rise 5 cents a litre on liquor, beer, and wine May 27
- SOCIAL SPENDING rises $2.15 billion for welfare, $150 million for housing, $175 million for laid-off workers

RAE'S RAVE REVIEW: Treasurer Floyd Laughtren, left, is congratulated by Premier Bob Rae after the Ontario NDP's first budget was tabled.

NDP's budget could end up satisfying no one

Ontario Treasurer Floyd Laughtren promised an anti-recession budget. Did he deliver? Not really. At best, one can say that the Ontario New Democratic Party's first budget won't make the recession too much worse.

Laughtren resisted the national trend to slash spending. For this, he should be commended.

But he did not resist the temptation to boost taxes; over all, they will rise by about $520 million this year alone. For this, he deserves no praise.

A recession is the worst time to lift money from people's wallets and purses.

Indeed, a recession is when governments should spend or cut taxes. Such a prescription — usually associated with the late British economist J.M. Keynes — may be out of fashion in these lean, mean, nasty times. But it still works.

For when individuals have no money to spend, someone else has to step in and help. That's one of the reasons we have governments.

In opposition, Laughtren applauded this kind of economics. In theory, he still does.

But what has he actually done? Here the story becomes a little more complicated.

A big chunk of government spending in Ontario goes up virtually automatically. Welfare payments, for instance, rise as workers lose their jobs. This has been a particular problem since Ottawa changed unemployment insurance rules. Many Ontario workers who would normally qualify for

Please see BUDGET/back page

What they said

- 6 I know the minister has been softening people up for a big deficit, but I really didn't expect a figure of almost $10 billion
— Stephen Dufour, financial analyst
- 6 It makes Floyd look like the Lone Ranger riding to the rescue
— Gord Wilson, labor leader
- 6 (It's the) beginning of the province's slide into the devastating spiral of increasing taxes and decreasing economic activity
— Mike Harris, Conservative leader
- 6 Very disappointing
— Michael Shapcott, housing activist

Civil service spared cuts despite urging by Ottawa

By Leslie Papp
TORONTO STAR

Ontario's 90,000 civil servants have escaped job cuts and wage caps, despite a $9.7 billion provincial deficit.

"It flies in the face of the advice we got from the federal government," Ontario Treasurer Floyd Laughtren conceded yesterday.

"We like to think the public service in Ontario are part of us, are partners," he told reporters, vowing not to match former federal finance minister Michael Wilson's civil service crackdown.

Wilson responded to Ottawa's troubling deficit by slapping a 3 per cent wage cap on federal public servants. In addition, 2,000 jobs will be cut for every 1 per cent wage hike won by their union, the Public Service Alliance of Canada.

Provincial governments in Atlantic

Canada, Quebec, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have followed Wilson's lead and moved to cap, or roll back, their public sector wages.

"I don't think that's appropriate," Laughtren said, explaining his budget at a news conference. "We would have had to lay off enormous numbers."

Instead of imposing a 3 per cent cap, Laughtren defended a 5.8 per cent wage hike won by the Ontario Public Service Employees Union this year.

Pattern-setting agreements for two civil service categories were set in December, when the inflation rate was running at about 6 per cent, he said.

An inflation rate of 5.6 per cent is expected this year, he said.

The government has done its best, he said, pointing with evident pride at predictions that more than 70,000 jobs will be created or saved through his budget.

Thomas Walkom
Analysis

1,000 to lose jobs as Elliot Lake mine shut

By Daniel Girard
TORONTO STAR

More than 1,000 people will lose their jobs with the closing of Denison Mines' uranium operation in Elliot Lake.

The Toronto-based company decided to close the mine after Ontario Hydro cancelled a contract to buy its uranium, president Bill James said yesterday. Denison employs 1,060 workers at the mine. Its only customer is Ontario Hydro.

Production will end once sales to the provincially owned utility have been completed in April or May, 1992. "We are in a state of shock," said George Farkouh, mayor of the town of 16,000 about 120 kilometres (75 miles) west of Sudbury.

"We were expecting it, but how can you react to the demise of your main industry?" Farkouh said in an interview last night.

Elliot Lake has been hit by the loss of more than 2,300 jobs during the past 15 months. Rio Algom Ltd. has closed two mines and eliminated 1,700 jobs. Denison scaled back operations and cut 650 jobs.

The town's unemployment rate now exceeds 60 per cent.

"It's a hell of a hit for the town, but there's nothing you can do to that mine," James said in an interview from Elliot Lake yesterday.

"It's just a sad economic fact."

Ontario Hydro expects to save about $100 million a year by cancelling the contract, said Doug Smith, its director of fuels.

Hydro fuels its nuclear reactors with uranium. It has been trying to renegotiate

the contract because it must pay a higher than market price for the mineral.

Despite months of talks, Denison and Hydro could not agree on a price, James said.

Northern Development Minister Shelley Martel said the province will not bail out Denison Mines, The Star's Derek Ferguson reports.

Ontario taxpayers have paid $1 billion in subsidies to the Elliot Lake uranium mine the past two years, Martel told re-

Please see 1,000/back page

We recycle!
Sections B & E of today's Star are printed on RECYCLED PAPER

100 killed as cyclone hammers Bangladesh

DHAKA (AP-Reuter) — A devastating tropical cyclone slammed into Bangladesh's low-lying southeastern coast today, killing at least 100 people and destroying tens of thousands of homes, officials said.

Officials said they feared a much higher death toll after the cyclone hit near the port of Chittagong with winds of up to 230 kilometres (145 miles) per hour.

The storm roared in from the Bay of Bengal at about midnight and battered 14 districts for more than seven hours, uprooting trees and ripping apart telephone and power lines, said a Relief Ministry official.

Weather officials said the storm was the most severe in the country's 20-year history. The winds were even stronger than the 1970 cyclone that killed 100,000 people.

Normal communications were severed, and the only source of information on the disaster came across the radio link of the Red Crescent, the Muslim equivalent of the Red Cross.

Before the storm hit, with waves up to six metres (20 feet) high, about three million people were moved out of an area where seven million live in 2,000 villages.

The relief ministry official said the storm left many offshore islands under 3.5 metres (10 feet) of water. The hurricane subsided around dawn.

The relief ministry official said the worst affected areas were the offshore islands of Bhola, Hatiya, Sandwip, Kutubdia, Moheshkhali and the mainland districts of Patuakhali, Chittagong, Cox's Bazaar, Feni and Satkhira.

PICK 3
Winning numbers: 432
CLEANSWEEP
Matchdraw: 11, 12, 21, 28, 38, 54
Four corners: 8, 19, 76, 80
"L": 15, 20, 40, 56, 67, 70, 79
Straight Line: 1, 39, 75

INDEX
March/91 Monday-Friday paid circulation 501,932

Apartments D13 Insight A21
Births, deaths D26 Jumble E8
Bridge E8 Landers F8
Comics F5 Legal notices F6
Crossword E8 Letters A22
Editorials A22 Stinger A2
Gamester A4 StarPhone A7
Goat A23 Star Probe F12
Horoscope F8 TV listings F3

A/News D/Sports/Classified
B/Business E/Careers
C/Golf Guide F/Entertainment/Life

Ben Wicks